SIX-HOUR RAIL LAW
COSTLY TO SHIPPER

Atlanta, Ga., July 19 (G.P.S.)—Approximately twenty-five dollars per car will be added to a shipper's freight bill if the six-hour day, train length and excess crew bills now pending in congress are enacted into law, according to figures supplied Atlanta railroad executives recently.

The six-hour day bill, it is pointed out, would require the railroads to pay the present eight-hour wage for six hours work. The train length proposal would limit the number of freight or passenger cars that might be hauled in one train, allowing, however, for no reduction in the size of train crews. The full crew proposal, it is added, under certain conditions would require the roads to carry less hands on trains. The transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States estimates that the bill for this legislation must be paid for by the shipper will be about $900,000,000 a year—a cost of $25 a car above the present rates.

STABS BLIND EYE TO RESTORE SIGHT

Surgeon Uses 40 Hot Needles and Electricity.

New York—Dr. Oscar B. Nugent, chief surgeon of the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat hospital, described how he thrust forty needles into a man's sightless eye, seared each wound with a high-frequency, short-wave electric current, and made the eye see again.

The operation, said the doctor in an interview after attending the assembly of the United States branch of the International College of Surgeons, is typical of the new technique in which eye surgeons make new wounds to cure old ones.

This stricken man—a typical case—suffered what is called a retinal separation. The retina, which is the inside coating of the eyeball, had become detached. It had pulled away from other parts of the tissue. The task was to bring the layers of tissue together and keep them there.

Teils Steps in Operation.

In this case, as in similar ones, specialists are treating. Dr. Nugent said the first step was to cut the tissue covering the white part of the eye.

"Then in order to operate on the back part of the eyeball, where the retina should be fast like the paper on the wall, it was necessary to cut one of the controlling muscles.

"Then the eyeball could be turned inside out in about a quarter of a circle. After that, over the whole area of detachment the small electrodes were put.

Each needle was thrust in the electric current was turned on, and it made its cauterizing wound. Each was left in its place until all the swelling, outpouring of fluid, detached from the holder that had been used to place it.

Each, then, at the climax of the operation, stuck in the eyeball like a pin in a cushion, with threads extending from the ends so that all were shown in proper location.

All Back Into Place.

Finally all were withdrawn, a fluid separating the retina from other tissues released, and the retina pressed back against the other tissues. The eyeball was turned around, back in place, as nature intended it to be. A repair of tissue, made all tissues grow together.

"The wounds in this case and in all such cases were made so that the scarred tissue would readily adhere to the other tissues," Dr. Nugent said. "The rough edges made by each needle were like rivets. They riveted the retina to the other tissue."

He meant, he said, they rivet the parts of the operation. Sometimes it does not. But his portion of successful operations of this kind now is 30 per cent.

Snow Barriers in Blue
Ridge Mountains Reduced

Washington, D. C. — Converting 176,610 acres of the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia into Shenandoah national park dislocated some interesting things about mountain life.

Some 432 families comprising 2,250 individuals were made homeless by the national park service from the picturesque area to lands better suited to farming and more accessible to schools, employment, churches and medical care.

Communities within walking distance of Skyland, a popular summer resort for a generation, have been snowbound year after year by six and seven feet of snow. There and in the valleys elsewhere in the Blue Ridge mountains, the people have been unable to get to school or to work.

A doctor had never entered one of the children had double pneumonia. "The snow was so deep he could not get there," said the mother. "So we just did the best we could. We're still living."

Susan B. Anthony Jailed
for Casting Vote in 1870

Buffalo.—The story of a woman who voted half a century before any other woman—and was arrested for it—has been unearthed in the old United States District court here.

The story was told in a handwritten document marked "Exhibit B" in the case of the United States vs. Susan B. Anthony.

It was part of the transcript of the trial of Susan Anthony, pioneer suffragist, held at Canandaigua, N. Y., June 17, 1873.

Miss Anthony, according to the testimony of W. J. James, inspector in charge of the election, had been arrested on election day, 1870.

A verdict of guilty on the charge of voting without having a lawful right was directed against Miss Anthony by the court. She was jailed, but later posted bail. Miss Anthony did not show whether she was ever was returned to prison.

WARNING AGAINST FAKE SOCIETIES

Postmaster General Farley Issues Statement of Interest To People of the Nation.

Postmaster General James A. Farley announced last night that the postal inspection service has launched a nation-wide drive against the operators of "fake mutual benefit life protection organizations which have been conducting their fraudulent schemes through the mails.

Complaints reaching the postoffice department indicate that there are approximately one hundred fraudulent enterprises now being operated in various sections of the country, which are costing the American public hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

Added impetus has been given the drive by the eight-year federal penitentiary sentence meted out to Angus C. Littlejohn, of Springfield, Illinois, and the three-year sentence to Charles E. Hill, of Lake Charles, Louisiana, both of whom were convicted for using the mails to defraud in connection with these spurious life protection organizations.

The promoters of these so-called "not for profit" mutual benefit societies, associations and clubs, in order to circumvent existing state laws, avoid the use of the word "insurance" and call it "protection." Instead of "policy" they use the word "certificate," and rather than referring to "premiums" they call them "contributions." They further mislead their victims by selecting confounding names such as "National Aid Society" and "Southern Life Club of Physicians' Guaranty Union" or other names similar to well known legitimate life insurance companies.

The promoters take advantage of the fact that very few people read the certificates, particularly the fine print on the inside containing many exceptions and limitations. Members are not informed, but beneficiaries soon find out, when the members, and the exceptions, in the fine print, wholly nullify any liability of the so-called "protection" companies.

The promoters accept persons indiscriminately up to the age of eighty-five years, yet they claim the strength of the society lies in the membership because it is "so carefully selected." They stress the point that no medical examination is required, and especially appeal to "those persons who, because of advanced age or physical infirmities, can not obtain any form of life protection." Literature of these concerns contains many false representations, including statements of fraudulent and benevolent features; and the claim that they are Special additional state and federal automotive taxes paid by the average Georgia motorist in 1936 are estimated to have cost him $56.90, which represents an assessment of 26.8 per cent on $212, the estimated value of the average motor vehicle.

These estimates were reported today by Neil W. Printup, secretary of the Georgia Petroleum Industries committee, who said they were based upon official automotive tax reports of the U. S. bureau of public roads.

Mr. Printup itemized the average Georgia motorist's 1936 automotive tax bill as follows:

State gasoline tax $42.40
State registration and miscellaneous fees 3.16
Federal taxes on gasoline, lubricants, tires, tubes, parts, accessories, etc. 11.34

Total $56.90

"Special additional automotive taxes, paid by the motor vehicle owner in addition to all the regular taxes, are becoming large items of cost," said Mr. Printup. "A tax of 26.8 per cent on property worth $212 is pretty heavy taxation."

"Our state gasoline tax, originally one (1c) a gallon, now is six (6c) cents. The duplicating federal levy makes us pay two taxes on the same gallon of gasoline, that same federal tax accounting for two-thirds of the cost of federal automotive taxes."

"It is time to think of the welfare of the motorist, to go largely for taxes, his money is to go into the hands of the largest retail buyers in this state, his purchases account for one-fifth of all retail sales, thereby creating widespread employment. Obviously, if his money goes into taxes, he cannot be expected to buy things he otherwise would."

"Prominent among ways in which excessive tax costs can be lowered is the repeal of the duplicating federal gasoline tax and of the federal tax on lubricants."

THIS TOWN
(Population: 1,755)
is making Georgia famous!

WHAT kind of towns are responsible for Georgia's electrical leadership? What kind of towns are adding fame to Georgia through their wise, far-sighted and labor-saving use of electric service in the home? Towns with some peculiar advantage in industry or business? Fashionable suburban communities filled with the fine homes of individuals of wealth? It's none of these. It's what we almost could call the TYPICAL Georgia town—the sort of town that has been the backbone of the state since Georgia first began to grow; the small but widespread town of homes, trees, gardens and yards where children play; the town peopled by substantial, hard-working, church-going, home-loving Georgians who have given our state its well-known name for honesty, sincerity and good sense.

Let's take a look at the twenty Georgia towns on the lines of this Company that are now leading in annual use of electric service in the home. These twenty towns, have put the biggest dependence on electricity in abolishing a great old household tasks and inconveniences.

The average population of these twenty towns is 1,755.

The average number of homes equipped with electric service is 248 per town.

The average use of electric service per year per home is 2,194.6 kilowatt hours—nearly THREE TIMES the national average of 748!

The average price paid per kilowatt hour by these homes is only 2.38 cents—or not much more than HALF the national average of 4.60 cents.
